

Inclusive language

- When referring to individuals and groups, we always use their preferred language. Use LGBTQ (or most current)
- When referring to a group, use non-gendered identifiers (e.g., folks or everybody)
- Use “woman” and “women” instead of “female” and “man” or “men” instead of “male”
- When featuring an individual, always defer to how they self identify
- Only identify a person’s race, ethnicity, or national origin if it is relevant
- Capitalize and do not pluralize Black
- When referring to those with disabilities, emphasize the person first (e.g., “A person with a disability” not “disabled person” or “handicapped person”)

Also be sure to research the origin of any idiom before using it in copy.
